

Discussion of Reich and “The Chemical Engineer Who Lacked a Chemical”

Step One

Answer one of the two questions below—realizing that a given question is tied to a particular reading:

- What does Reich mean when he says that we are living in the age of the “great deal”, and what do you think is the significance of living in this age?
- What do you think is the most important thing you picked up from reading “The Chemical Engineer who lacked a Chemical”? Why do you think it is important?

Step Two

Get together in a group, based upon what you wrote about, then come up with a combined answer to the question that you just wrote about. Also, write down and ask one question to the whole group.
