Peer Review Sheet for Essay Three

Today, we’re going to be doing a more involved peer review in class. There will be four required questions for you to answer, and then you will add three more of your own questions to have answered. Remember the more depth that you give in your answers, the more useful your response will be to your peer. Also, this time around you will be turning in all drafts and peer review sheets with your final paper, so this will count.

Make sure that at least one person reads your piece, and make sure that he or she answers all of your questions in more than three sentences. Now, let us move onto the required questions:

The Required Questions:
What is my thesis? Please state in it your own words.

Could you underline my subtopics as you see them? After underlining them answer this question: describe how my subtopics do, or don't, follow my thesis.

Do my quotes float? In other words, are all quotes introduced and adequately tied back to the topic sentence of the paragraph. If the answer is no, then indicate the places in the text with the word, “FLOAT” in the margin.

Using one of your highlighters for each of the three things below (this means having three highlighters at hand) highlight the following:

1. Every introduction to a quote OR paraphrase. Use one color for this.
2. Every quote or paraphrase used. Use another color for this
3. After that use another colored highlighter and highlight every bit of analysis of a quote or paraphrase you see.

After you are done, write down the number of things you highlight for 1-3.
If you finish early, then you’ve probably shortchanged yourself. Go back and re-read your piece—making any changes or corrections that you might want to due to peer feedback.
